The exciting new CLAY TARGET GAME inspired by the Argentine shooting experience.

ARGENTINA™

ARGENTINA™ is a new, original, instinctive clay target game for intermediate and advanced shooters requiring speed, focus and stamina. The shooter is equipped with a sporting clays shotgun, either 2 barreled or semi-auto, and 25 target shotshells. All gauges of gun are fun in this game.

The game field, or field of play, could be sized to fit any terrain but could fit well on an existing Skeet field. It is intended to be circular or elliptical with 6 clay target traps (throwers) ringed around the circumference of the field. Each trap is positioned to throw a single target into the field of play. In a round, each trap is randomly programmed to throw a target multiple times. These traps are numbered 1 through 6 (see diagram next page).

The shooter assumes a position at the predetermined firing station placed off-of-center in the circular game field and faces the center of the field.

A round consists of 25 shots fired at 12 randomly selected pairs of clay targets, thrown either simultaneously (true pair) or with a 1 second delay between targets (report pair) and ending with a final single target. A round begins with a single voice command after the shooter has safely assumed the firing station and is loaded for the first pair. The first pair is thrown and presented to the shooter who fires a single shell at each of the 2 targets. After the second shot is fired there will be an 8 second pause allowing the shooter to reload and reassume a ready position. The second random pair is then thrown automatically (without a voice command) when the 8 second delay elapses. After firing at the second pair, the shooter is again awarded an 8 second delay to reload for the 3rd random pair and so forth. This continues through the presentation of 12 random pairs and 24 shots. After the 12th pair, the round ends with a final 8 second delay, the presentation of a single target, and the 25th shot. The shooter then checks his shotgun for safety and quits the game field. His score is counted by the number of targets broken, 25 being a perfect score.

HOW MANY HEARTBEATS CAN YOU SQUEEZE INTO 8 SECONDS?

A round of 25 targets, 12 pairs and a final single, is finished in just under 2 minutes.

The basic game, 12 random pairs and 1 single target thrown on a determined timed sequence as shown above, states that the shooter is unaware of the origin of next target pair. Each pair is thrown from a random combination of the traps (6 total) on the field's perimeter allowing 45 possible pair combinations.

Because the pair presentations are random, the shooter will be unlikely to see the same combination twice in a round and no two consecutive rounds will be identical. The final single target will also be thrown randomly from one of the 6 traps.

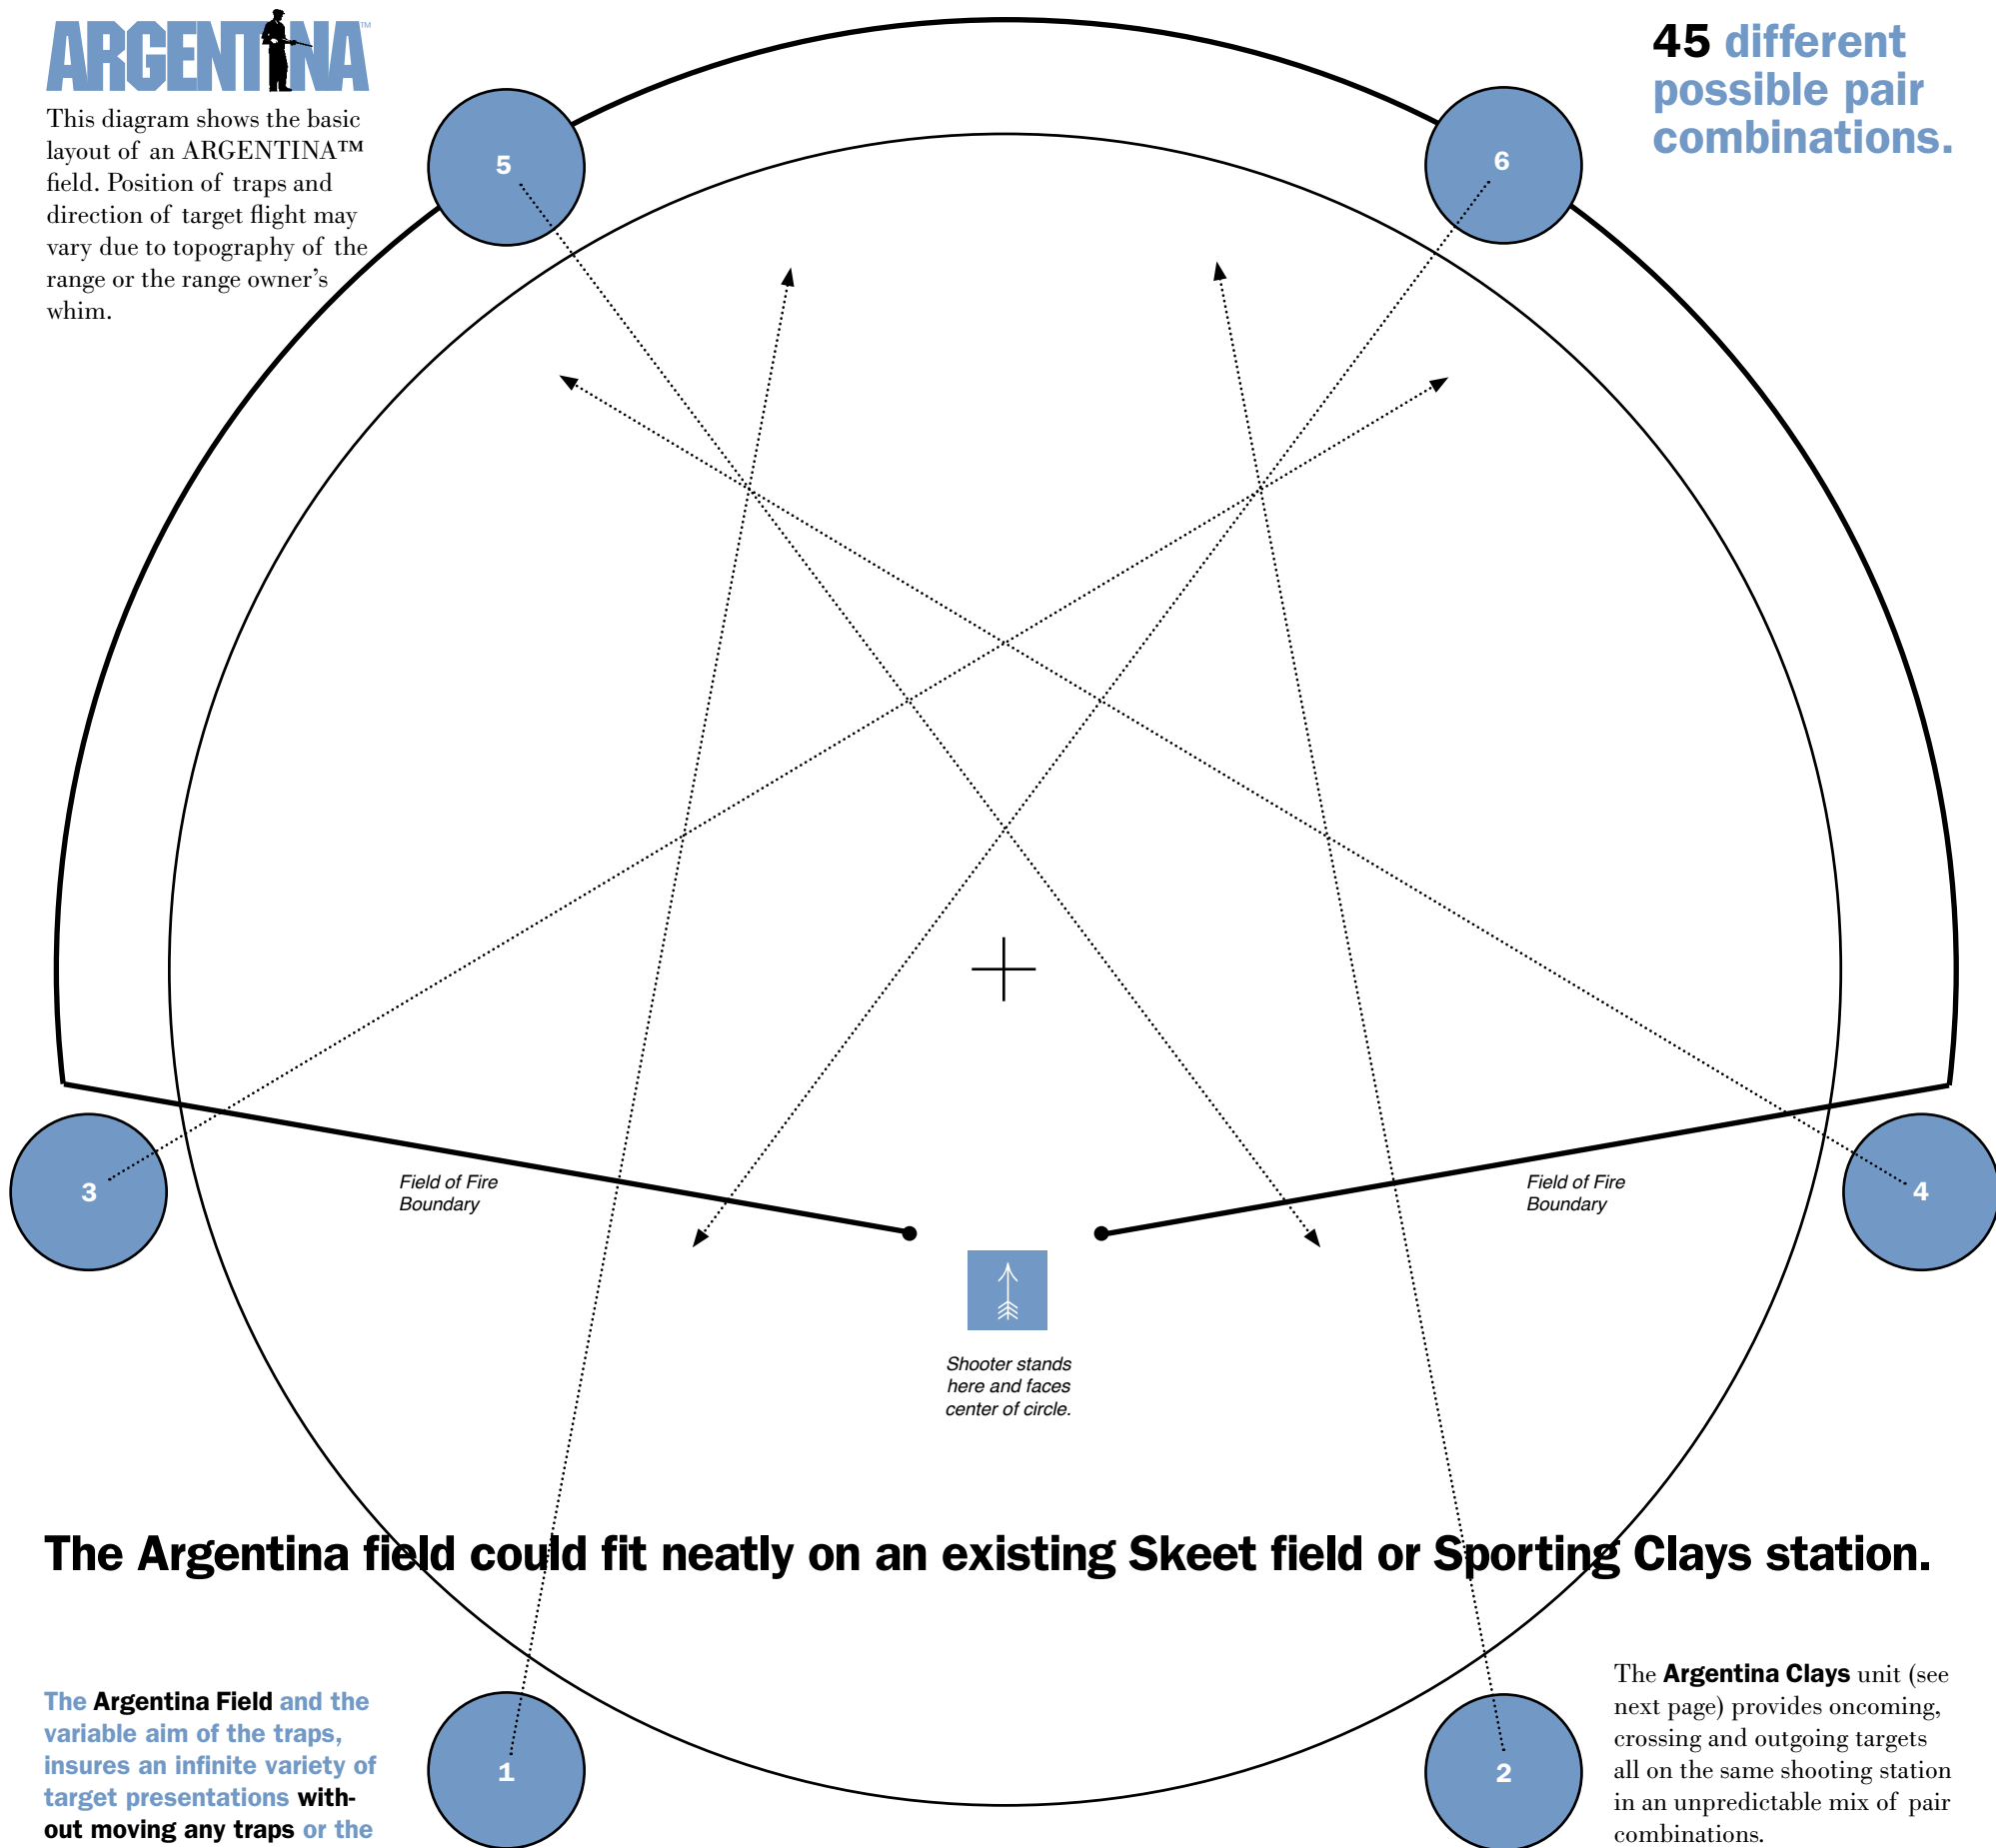

The shooter is prohibited from pivoting to acquire and/or shoot thrown targets. The shooter's 'field of fire' is limited to a 170 degree arc, 85 degrees to either side of the game field's center which the shooter must face prior to a pair or target being thrown. Any targets broken outside the arc will be disallowed, the round aborted, and the score ruled invalid. The rules require that the firearm remain pointed within the field of fire boundaries at all times except when entering or exiting the game field.

The excitement comes from both the 8 second interval between pairs and the random presentation of the next pair. The programming insures that no two pairs will be thrown consecutively and no two consecutive rounds will be identical.

This diagram shows the basic layout of an ARGENTINA™ field. Position of traps and direction of target flight may vary due to topography of the range or the range owner's whim.

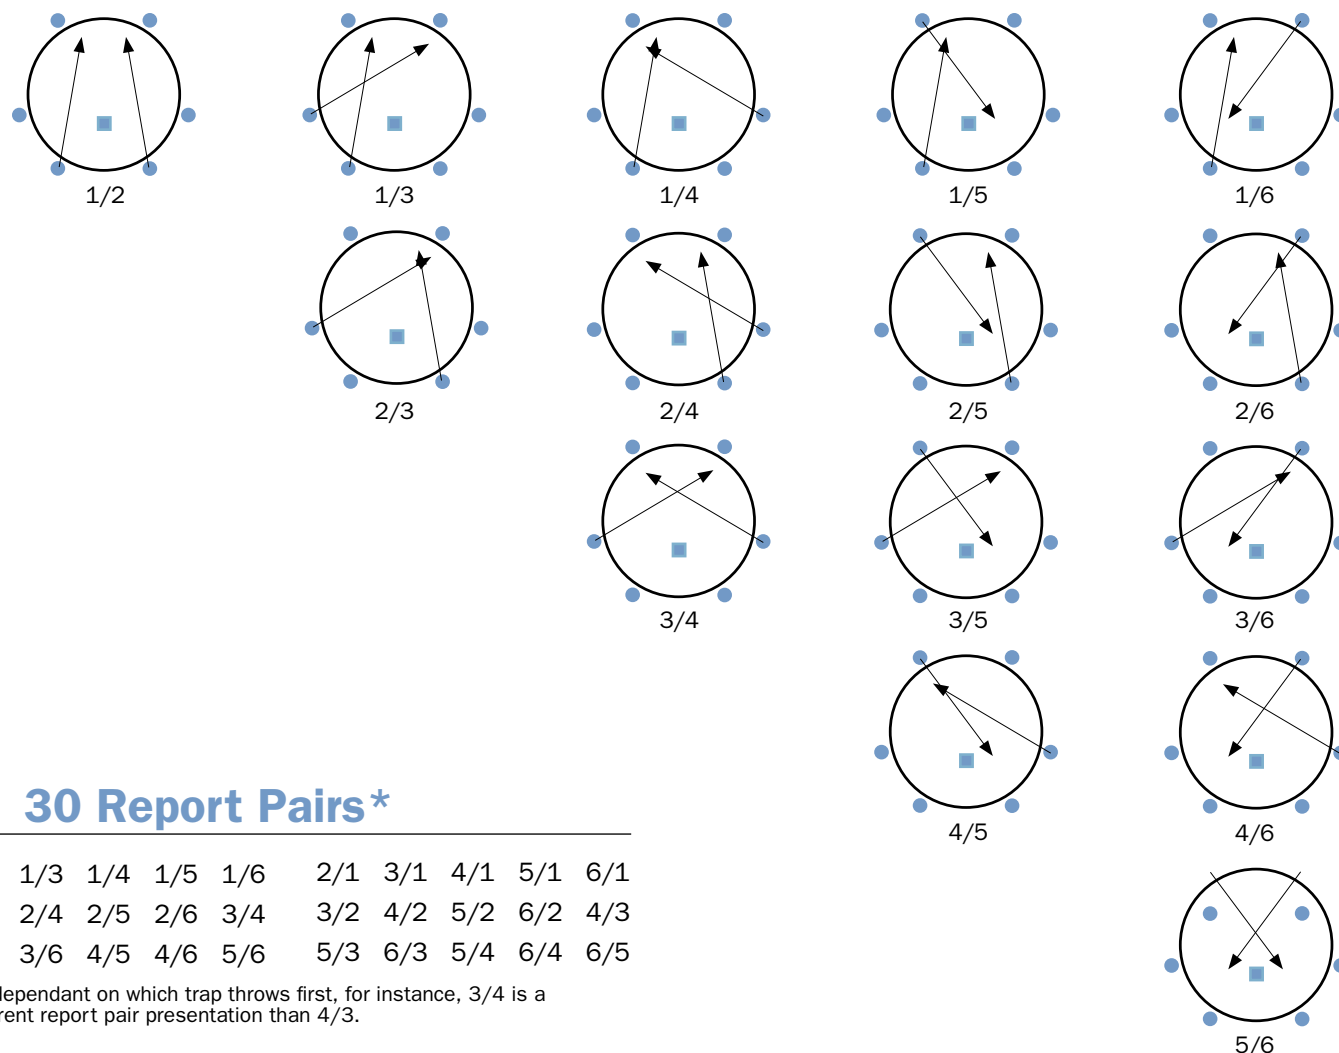

45 different possible pair combinations.

The Argentina field could fit neatly on an existing Skeet field or Sporting Clays station.

The Argentina Field and the variable aim of the traps, insures an infinite variety of target presentations without moving any traps or the Shooter's station.

The Argentina Clays unit (see next page) provides oncoming, crossing and outgoing targets all on the same shooting station in an unpredictable mix of pair combinations.

Each pair is selected randomly from a pair of the traps (6 total) on the field's perimeter. 45 different combinations are possible

All the True Pair combinations, fifteen total, are shown on the right. Thirty more combinations of Report Pairs are possible by adding the 1 second delay to the True Pair combination and/or reversing the order. For instance, 1/3 and 3/1 would be different Report Pairs. See the Chart below for a complete listing.

● 15 True Pairs

1/2 1/3 1/4 1/5 1/6
2/3 2/4 2/5 2/6 3/4
3/5 3/6 4/5 4/6 5/6

●● 30 Report Pairs*

1/2 1/3 1/4 1/5 1/6 2/1 3/1 4/1 5/1 6/1
2/3 2/4 2/5 2/6 3/4 3/2 4/2 5/2 6/2 4/3
3/5 3/6 4/5 4/6 5/6 5/3 6/3 5/4 6/4 6/5

* X2, dependant on which trap throws first, for instance, 3/4 is a different report pair presentation than 4/3.

ARGENTINA CLAYS™ is powered by a unique combination of chip sets and circuitry that allow our proprietary software to throw targets both randomly and at the 8 second intervals.
